

Project Statement and Reflection:

This production is meant to be a satire. It is a short adventure about my character Mikealike. I spent half a day acquiring sounds from freesound.org. I then filmed with my Samsung S20. Honestly, I left my DSLR at my friends in town, but this might have been an advantage. My S20 got good close shots, although I may have surrendered video quality. It is a bit grainy. Lighting is probably the most important thing, and good cameras. I'm sure very expensive cameras film darker rooms better. I used my Zoom H6 and recorded the sounds of typing and the pencil. Timing the video with the sounds of typing was pretty hard and I didn't perfect it. I tried to use cuing techniques that did help. Editing was fun. It just got better and better. Although building it, I felt a little lost at first, but as it grew and evolved, the mood came out. It did take some foresight when I was acquiring all the sounds to visualize it as a whole, but when it got going, it really came together. This was fun, and probably my best video.